What's moving in AI.

AI NEWS

AI just took over the follow-up.

Every 2026 real estate AI roundup now centers on the same use case: automated follow-up and database nurture. Why that one? Because it's the marketing task agents can't sustain by hand. The stat the whole industry keeps citing: 80% of deals need five or more follow-ups, but most agents quit after one.

— FOR YOU. FOR THIS ROOM. —

The right message has one job: get the appointment.

WHAT MOST SCRIPTS DO

Qualify. Pitch. Screen.

- Interrogate on the phone.
- Try to close before you meet.
- Talk people out of showing up.

WHAT THE RIGHT SCRIPT DOES

Book the meeting.

- One clear ask: get together.
- Save the selling for in person.
- Get in front of them, fast.

— A 4-WEEK BUILD —

The Marketing Engine month.

P

✓ WEEK 01

The Problem

WED AUG 5

Why marketing is the business now, where agents fall short, and the engine that fixes it.

T

✓ WEEK 02

Enough Times

WED AUG 12

Consistency is marketing: the 33-Touch, the numbers the top coaches live by, the engine that never forgets.

R

WEEK 03

The Right Thing

WED AUG 19

Say the right thing: the script whose only job is to set the appointment. Do not over-qualify, get in front of them.

Enough People

WED AUG 26

Fill the database: gather the leads and grow the audience your engine markets to.

● YOU ARE HERE

— THE PROOF —

The appointment is where it's won.

SET → MET → TAKEN → SOLD

The appointment funnel. Every closing traces back to an appointment that got set.

~1 IN 3 HELD
APPOINTMENTS
CLOSES

A held appointment converts near 30 percent. The call does not close, it books.

~70% OF SET
APPOINTMENTS
SHOW

Set more than you need. Some reschedule, some ghost. That is normal, not a reason to pre-screen.

THE DECISION IS MADE IN PERSON

Buyers and sellers commit face to face, not on a qualifying call.

The data says one thing: your call's job is to set the appointment, not to sell.

The right thing to say gets the meeting.

Most agents script for the wrong outcome. They try to inform, impress, or qualify. The right script does one thing: it earns the appointment. Everything else is noise until you are in the room.

THE OVER-QUALIFIER

Asks ten questions, pitches the market, tries to close on the call, and talks the lead out of meeting.

RESULT · A GOOD CONVERSATION AND NO APPOINTMENT.

THE APPOINTMENT-SETTER · THE WINNER

Says the one right thing, makes a clear ask, and books the time. The selling happens in person.

RESULT · A CALENDAR FULL OF HELD APPOINTMENTS.

Same lead, same call. One agent qualifies them out. The other gets in front of them.

Stop qualifying. Start booking.

The instinct is to screen: budget, timeline, pre-approval, are they serious. Every screening question is one more chance for the lead to opt out. You are not the loan officer. Your job is to get in front of them, where the real conversation happens.

OVER-QUALIFYING SOUNDS LIKE

- "Are you pre-approved yet?"
- "Are you ready to buy right now?"
- Questions that hand them an exit.

THE RIGHT ASK SOUNDS LIKE

- "Let's go take a look together."
- "I have Thursday or Saturday open."
- One clear invitation to meet.

THE POINT

Qualifying is the lender's job. Yours is to get the appointment and get in front of them.

The wrong words lose the appointment.

Same lead, same interest. What you say next either books the meeting or ends it. The difference is not enthusiasm, it is the ask. Vague scripts stall. Qualifying scripts scare people off. The right script makes meeting the easy yes.

THE PRESENTER

SURFACE: Sends a market report and waits for a reply.

REAL → No ask, no appointment. The lead goes cold.

THE INTERROGATOR

SURFACE: Runs a qualifying checklist before offering to meet.

REAL → Feels screened. Books with the agent who offered to help.

THE SETTER

SURFACE: Leads with value, then a clear, specific ask to meet.

REAL → Gets the appointment. Converts it in person.

WHY IT'S THE MAKE-OR-BREAK

You cannot recover an appointment you talked yourself out of. Say the one right thing: let's meet.

Set this many. Close this many.

The appointment funnel, run for this room. Held appointments convert at roughly one in three. So work backward from the closings you want, and set more than you think you need.

To close 2 deals a month: hold about 6 appointments (set ~8 to 9, since ~70% show). Want 4 a month? Double it. The lever is appointments set.

SET

8-9 a month

Booked with a clear ask, not a qualifying call. Set more than you think you need.

MET

~70% show up

Roughly 6 held. The rest reschedule or ghost. That is normal.

You won't script it perfectly every time. The engine will.

Knowing the right thing to say is one problem. Saying it, to the right person, at the right moment, every day, is another. Clara drafts the follow-up for you: the right message, aimed at the appointment, ready every morning.

BY HAND

- Blank on what to actually say.
- Generic "just checking in."
- The ask never gets made.

CLARA · THE ENGINE

- The right message, drafted daily.
- Personal to each relationship.
- Always pointed at the appointment.

THE WHOLE POINT

The right thing to say, sent at the right time, on repeat. Clara is how you actually do it.

Say the right thing. Get in front of them.

The right script does not sell. It books. Lead with value, make one clear ask, and stop qualifying people out. The conversion happens in the room, so your only job on the call is to get to the room.

Say the [right thing] · Make the [ask] · Set the [appointment] · Convert it
[in person]

THIS WEEK

Pick one lead, cut the qualifying, and make the clear ask this week. Next Wednesday: Enough People. The Marketing Engine, Week 4.
