What's moving in AI.

AI NEWS

The AI-visibility playbook just went mainstream.

HousingWire's new guide (July 9) on winning AI recommendations prints the exact moves we teach: write one bio paragraph and paste it identically on Google, Zillow, and Realtor.com, repeat your real service areas consistently, and run a citation audit so your identity matches across the web. Their words: AEO and GEO run on identity signals AI can verify.

This week we work the T: your Realtor.com.

One profile is a signal. Two are proof.

You indexed Zillow last week. But recommendation engines don't trust a single source, they triangulate. Realtor.com is the second portal AI cross-checks, and a blank one quietly cancels out a great Zillow.

ONE SOURCE ONLY

Great Zillow. Realtor.com blank, or still showing the brokerage you left in 2024.

RESULT · AI SEES A GAP, READS YOU AS UNVERIFIED, AND HEDGES.

TWO THAT AGREE · THE WINNER

Same Claim, same name, same niche on Zillow and Realtor.com. Both current.

RESULT · TWO SOURCES CONFIRM EACH OTHER. AI NAMES YOU WITH CONFIDENCE.

Same agent either way. Two profiles telling the identical story is what turns a maybe into a name. That is the whole game today.

The five signals of a trusted profile.

"Trusted" means your Realtor.com profile is claimed, complete, and telling AI the same story as Zillow. These are the five signals it cross-checks, and every one has to match.

THE 5 SIGNALS

- Claimed & complete: photo, bio, contact, all filled.
- Bio opens with your Claim: the same sentence, verbatim.
- NAP matches Zillow: name, brokerage, phone identical.
- Service areas + specialty agree: same niche, same ZIPs.
- Recent solds + reviews: verifiable, current activity.

THE LITMUS TEST

- Put Zillow and Realtor.com side by side: do they describe the same agent?
- Would AI cross-reading both gain confidence, or lose it?
- Is your newest activity here from this quarter?

THE ONE MOST AGENTS MISS

They go all-in on Zillow and leave Realtor.com blank. To AI, a missing second source doesn't read as neutral. It reads as thin. That's next.

AI checks your references.

Before AI names an agent, it triangulates identity across every source it can find. When Zillow and Realtor.com agree, that agreement is the credibility. When they conflict or one is blank, AI plays it safe and names someone whose sources line up.

ONE SOURCE

SURFACE: Strong Zillow. No Realtor.com, or an abandoned one.

REAL → Thin and unverified. AI can't confirm you, so it hedges.

TWO THAT CONFLICT

SURFACE: Zillow says luxury, Realtor.com says first-time buyers, old brokerage on one.

REAL → Signals fight. AI loses confidence and moves on.

TWO THAT AGREE

SURFACE: Identical Claim, NAP, and niche on both, both current.

REAL → Every source confirms the last. AI names you, by name.

WHY IT'S THE MAKE-OR-BREAK

This is a 20-minute claim-and-mirror job, not a rewrite. You already wrote the words on Zillow. Trust week is making a second authority source say the exact same thing.

Kayla's Realtor.com.

Same Claim, second source. Here is Kayla's Realtor.com, built to mirror the Zillow she indexed last week.

Her Realtor.com bio opens with the identical sentence: "I help north-metro empty-nesters sell the family home for top dollar and land in the right next chapter, without getting stuck between two homes, with my Bridge Plan."

THE MIRROR

Word-for-word match to Zillow

Same Claim, same name, same north-metro ZIPs. Nothing paraphrased, nothing new.

THE NAP

Kayla Smith · same brokerage · one phone

Formatted identically to Zillow and Google. Three sources, one entity.

Claim it. Mirror it. Prove it.

Same weekly rhythm, second profile. Twenty minutes and Realtor.com goes from a stale directory listing to a source that backs up your Zillow.

DO THIS WEEK · THE CLICK-PATH

- Claim → realtor.com/realestateagents → find your name → "Claim your profile." No listing yet? Add it free in the agent portal.
- Mirror → paste your Claim in the bio, match your NAP to Zillow exactly, set the same specialties and service areas.
- Prove → import recent solds, and request one review here too.

THE CONSISTENCY CHECK

- Name spelled identically on both portals.
- Same niche language, no leftover generic bio.
- Phone and brokerage match everywhere, including Google.

ONE WARNING

Do not write a fresh, "better" version of your Claim here. Word-for-word repetition is the feature, not laziness. Different wording reads to AI as a different person.

Your Realtor.com, verified.

Before next Wednesday, Realtor.com should be claimed, its bio should mirror Zillow word for word, your NAP should match, and one review ask should be out.

Checklist: [profile claimed] · [bio mirrors Zillow] · [NAP matches] · [review ask sent]

DO THIS TODAY

Claim the profile and paste your Claim before you close the laptop. Screenshot into the community. Next Wednesday: Google Business Profile. Week 4: Entity.

— THE CITED SERIES • WEEK 4 OF 5 —

Become an Entity.

Wed Jul 22 • 10 AM CT. Your Google Business Profile is the most-trusted entity source AI has. We verify it, load your Claim, and go after Google reviews.
